

Myoepithelioma of the Palate: a Case Report

Sina M<sup>1</sup>, Ghavimi MA<sup>2</sup>, Emamverdzadeh P<sup>1</sup>, Razbani M<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Assistant Professor, Oral and Maxillofacial Pathology Dept, Dental Faculty, Tabriz University of Medical Sciences, Tabriz.

<sup>2</sup> Assistant Professor, Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery Dept, Dental Faculty, Tabriz University of Medical Sciences, Tabriz.

<sup>3</sup> Post Graduated Student Oral and Maxillofacial Pathology Dept, Dental Faculty, Tabriz University of Medical Sciences, Tabriz

Abstract

Myoepithelioma is a rare benign neoplasm of salivary glands which comprises less than 1% of all salivary gland tumors. This tumor mostly involves the parotid gland and less often involves the minor salivary glands of the oral cavity. In this article, a case of myoepithelioma in the minor salivary glands of the palate is presented along with its clinical and histopathological features and the probable differential diagnoses.

Keywords: Myoepithelioma, Salivary gland, Neoplasm, Palate